*Results after shoot-off

The 2007 season at Prado came to an end with the usual Christmas pot luck and swap meet. Oh, and there was field target match, too.

The biggest news of the day was Ian Roberts cleaning the course. Even though the Prado course is typically less challenging than Angeles, I don't remember ever seeing anyone clean it. And I know it hasn't happened in the last year. But Ian pulled it off this month. Congratulations!

Tim McMurray nearly did the same thing. Tim was clean until the last lane. But he dropped one shot and had to settle for second place.

The spring class ended in a tie for first, between Steve Moore and Rick Rogers, and another tie for third, between Ron Jobbes and Vince Pacheco. Steve won first place by hitting of 4 of 4 shots in the shoot-off lane, while Rick went 3 for 4. By mutual agreement, Ron and Vince shot off-hand for their tie-breaker. Ron prevailed to take third.

Eddie Olguin and one other shooter are not listed in the score tally above because I didn't get their score sheets after the match.

You may notice that the course was only 34 shots this time instead of the usual 36. That was due to the demise of an old friend. The alligator with the tiny kill zone that we all love to hate had to be taken out of the game. But there is still hope. Rick Rogers took him home to perform surgery and he should be back in action next month. In spite of the urging of several Prado regulars, opening up the kill zone is NOT included in the plans.

With the end of the year comes the time to pay dues for next year. Many people took the opportunity to pay their dues at the match. If you did not, you can mail a check to;

300 W. Latchwood Lane

Dues are $20 for the year and members enjoy a discount on match fees relative to non-members.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!
